DUE TO TACT AND ENERGY

Secretary of Committee in Charge of Ceremonies March 4 Booked for Office.

The secretary of an inaugural commitinduction into office of a President and committee itself is a sort of clearing house for the smaller bodies which arrange the various features of an inauguration, and Mayor Gaynor Calls on Com this machinery is kept in motion until the finished product is turned out.

Need of Tact and Energy.

Such a position calls for the constant employment of tact and resourcefulness. not to speak of the energy that one who fills it must possess, and, it is pointed out, Mr. Vick gave abundant evidence of there was at no time friction nor dupliconfusion, and accomplishes results with-out attracting attention to himself. In the final analysis, everything was "up to Vick." for he was the official charged with the responsibility of seeing that the committee's plans were carried out.

retary of the inaugural committee. Mr. Vick, whose home is at Rutherford, N. J. was in charge of the Wilson headquarters in New York. He was assistant secretary of the democratic national committee, and one of the right-hand men of Chairman William F. McCombs. In the handling of the New York headquarters Mr. Vick, it is explained, inaugurated a business system which produced gratifying results.
